October	Paul Loomans, Nick Clement, Jack Carter, Richard Moll
Card Drawing	Charlie Reppenhagen ***
Wine	Dick Roberts

And We Have a Winner

Charlie Reppenhagen's ticket was drawn from a can that held tickets from 19 people, and after an "eeny meeny miny mo" ceremony, he picked the joker from a deck down to just 2 cards, winning $2412. He is the 8th winner since the raffle started in March 2014, and his is the 2nd largest pot. The raffle has paid out $11,137 to members and sojourners and earned twice that for the Club and our projects.

Paul Harris Recognition

A Logical Mystery Tour

Club Secretary Michael Pease prepared a new presentation (just in case) last month when Andy's last speaker was slow to confirm, and this week when Dick's speaker was busy down at the border, he put it to use.

Turning from the math and science he's known for, he based it on his actual college major, philosophy, and his special area, logic. The problems he picked were the sort many people use for recreation, and they illustrated a variety of problem solving methods, ranging from methodical trial-and-error to classic Venn diagrams. Although none of the problems required the use of special symbols or techniques, at least one in the audience, claiming math education up through calculus, remarked she didn't understand a single word of it.

One problem dated back to Lewis Carroll in 1887 and was a precursor to the present-day Monty Hall problem, which even professors of mathematics at universities get wrong: if you have a bag that contains a marble, either black or white, and you add a white marble, shake it, and then remove a white marble, what's the probability the marble left in the bag is white? No, it's not 1/2. It is actually 2/3.
